

English Society Online Magazine Proposal

As the chairperson of the School English Society, I have been asked by the society to approach you regarding the possibility of the society establishing an online magazine, short stories are included in the English curriculum. The purpose is to introduce short stories to students and the proposed online magazine could become a valuable learning tool to let the students learn more efficiently and conveniently.

To the reasons of why we organised an online magazine is that firstly, in today's society, science and technology is improving days by days. Everyone gets their own mobile phone. The internet is the new media for us to communicate with the youngsters. Online learning are more preferred by the students. You can read anywhere and learn anytime. The airline magazine could become a valuable learning tool.

Next, our establishment of programmes are perfect to prevent others sources of unknown origin to invade our website. We plan to employ a webmaster to develop the site and the magazine will be supervised by an English teacher to ensure that our website are safe for learning and short stories are updated regularly. The articles for the magazine are planned to be written by our English teachers.

Moreover, the most important of the website, the content of the magazine. Firstly, the online magazine will feature both classic and untemporary short stories written by famous writers. Secondly, students can subscribe to the online magazine and search for short stories from all collection. Also, there will be a discussion forum, students can ask questions and share their reviews on the website and refer to the online magazine for facts and reviews. Furthermore, we plan to invite senior form students to write reviews for the magazine.

Last but not least, it's believed that a short stories are more preferred and acceptable for the students. The advantage is that it takes students a lot of time of learning by keep looking the mobile phone to encourage students to read short stories and visit our website. We may intend to give publicity of our website in the morning assembly and rewarding the top three students who get the maximum browsing rate.

As a result, we are confident that students will like the online magazine. We look forward to your support on this and hope that we can have the opportunity to come and meet you in the next few days to discuss our plans fully.
